Overview

"God gives faith not so that it can deal with insignificant things, but (so that it can deal with) things the whole world cannot handle, such as death, sin, world, and devil."

—Martin Luther

A prolific author, renowned preacher, respected professor, and key figure in the Reformation, Martin Luther is still, after five hundred years, one of the most influential people in history. Above all, he worked to make the Bible accessible to everyone. His writings continue to guide and encourage Christians because he points us to Jesus and His Gospel.

These daily devotions are drawn from the many volumes in the American Edition of Luther's Works, including volumes that are newly translated into English, thus providing material from Luther never before available to English-speaking readers.

A daily dose of Luther is good for the soul!
