Reconceptualizing Development in the Global Information Age

Reconceptualizing Development in the Global Information Age

The conditions in which 'development'—the process by which people, individually and collectively, enhance their capacities to improve their lives according to their values and interests—operates have significantly changed in the global information age, a period characterized by the technological revolution in information and communication, the rise of the networking form of social organization, and the global interdependence of economies and societies. This volume aims to redefine the means and goals of development in this new context: first, by characterizing the specific mode of development, informational development, that the authors consider to be the driver of the creation of material wealth in the twenty-first century; secondly, by reconceptualizing human development as the fulfilment of human wellbeing in the multidimensionality of the human experience, ultimately affirming dignity as the supreme value of development; thirdly, by examining the relationship between informational development and human development.

After first setting out its analytical framework, the book brings together a diverse set of empirically-rich case studies to illustrate this investigation from across the globe—Silicon Valley, Costa Rica, Chile, South Africa, Finland, the European Union, and China—and concludes by attempting to reconceptualize development. It raises important questions and provides observations, including examining the concept of 'dignity as development', to contribute to a policy debate that should provide specific answers linked to the conditions of each society, and be enacted by democratic institutions in a concerted global effort to save humankind while there is still time.

Jon Watson:

As a college student I exactly feel bored in order to read. If their teacher requested them to go to the library in order to make a summary for some guide, they are complained. Just very little students that have reading as a hobby or real their hobby. They just do what the teacher want, like asked to the library. They go to right now there but nothing reading really. Any students feel that studying is not important, boring along with can't see colorful pics on there. Yeah, it is being complicated. Book is very important in your case. As we know that on this period of time, many ways to get whatever we would like. Likewise word says, ways to reach Chinese's country. Therefore this Reconceptualizing Development in the Global Information Age can make you sense more interested to read.
