Caroline is a worrier. . .

Her husband died and left her with little money or survival skills. Her son thinks the choices she's made since then are foolish. And every time an opportunity looks good, something makes her second guess herself.

Rodney has always thought life was good—until a heart attack laid him out flat. Retired now from his executive lifestyle, he begins to realize he wasn't much more than a workaholic.

Marriage isn't on either of their minds...but their minds are not God's, and He is busy taking care of the lilies of the field—and His children.
